

Paw Marks

By Lionel Westley

I don't know whether or not this qualifies for the "Technical Tips" column, but it works!

For those like me, who only possess the facility of a carport, in which to shelter your freshly washed vehicle overnight; only to find next morning that there are gritty paw marks where your neighbour's cat (or cats) have held a corroboree on it.

Solution: Simply take a handful of naphthalene, and place it in the foot of a nylon stocking, and suspend it in the carport somewhere, and you'll find that cats will not come within coo-ee of it again.

As the powder gradually fritters away, you will need to renew it from time to time.
